4. In the Equality Act 2010, a disability is a physical or a mental condition which has a substantial and long-term impact on your ability to do normal day to day activities. You are automatically covered by the Equality Act definition of disability if you have, or have ever had, a condition such as HIV, cancer or multiple sclerosis, even if you are currently able to carry out normal day to day activities. The same applies to historical mental health conditions that have lasted over 12 months, even if you feel you are now fully recovered. Disabilities and long term health conditions can cover a wide range and may include neuro-diversity, mental ill health, sensory impairments and learning disabilities, in addition to physical disabilities. It's important that line managers privately know about any ongoing issues and more generally as an organisation we need to be able to make reasonable adjustments so that all our staff feel they have been given the best opportunity to carry out their role most effectively. Do you consider yourself to have a disability within the meaning of the Equality Act 2010?
